
This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

GoogleTM books

<https://books.google.com>

BUNYAN'S WATER OF LIFE.

Spurgeon's Edition.

4412. h 13.

THE WATER OF LIFE; OR,
A DISCOURSE
SHOWING THE RICHNESS AND GLORY OF THE
GRACE AND SPIRIT OF THE GOSPEL.

BY JOHN BUNYAN.

K

WITH PREFACE BY C. H. SPURGEON.

“And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.”—Rev. xxii. 17.

LONDON:
Printed for the Pastor's College by
PASSMORE & ALABASTER, PATERNOSTER ROW.
1868.

THE
EPISTLE TO THE READER.

COURTEOUS READER,

I have now presented thee with something of a discourse of the water of life and its virtues; therefore thou mayest, if thou wilt, call this book, Bunyan's Bill of his Master's Water of Life. True, I have not set forth at large the excellent nature and quality thereof, nor can that so be done by the pen or tongue of men or angels. Yet this I have said, and so saying, said truly, that whosoever shall drink of this water, shall find it in him a well of water; and not only so, but a well springing up in him to everlasting life, let his disease be what it will. And as men in their bills, for conviction to readers, do give an account to the country of the persons cured, and the diseases that have been removed by liquors and preparations they have made for that end, so could I, were it not already (by Holy Writ) done by an infallible pen to my hand, give you accounts of numberless numbers that have not only been made to live, but to live for ever, by drinking of this water, this pure water of life. Many of them indeed are removed from hence, and live where they cannot be spoken with as yet; but abundance of them do still remain here, and have their abode yet with men.

Only, if thou wouldst drink it, drink it by itself, and that thou mayest not be deceived by that which is counterfeit, know it as it comes from the hand of our Lord, without mixture, pure and clear as crystal. I know there are many mountebanks in the world, and every one of them pretend they have this water to sell. But my advice is, that thou go directly to the throne thyself (Heb. iv. 16), or as thou art bidden, come to the waters (Isaiah lv. 1), and there thou shalt be sure to have that which is right and good, and that which will certainly make thee well, let thy disease, or trouble, or pain, or malady, be what it will. For the price, care not for that, it is cheap enough, this is to be had without money or price. "I will give," saith God and the Lamb, "unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely." (Rev. xxi. 6.) Hence he says again, "Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." (Rev. xxii. 17.) So that thou hast no ground to keep back because of thy poverty; nay, for the poor it is prepared and set open, to the poor it is offered, the poor and needy may have it of free cost. (Isaiah xli. 17, 18.)

But let it not be slighted because it is offered to thee upon terms so full, so free. For thou art sick, and sick unto death, if thou drinkest not of it; nor is there any other than this that can heal thee, and make thee well. Farewell. The Lord be thy physician.

So prays thy friend,

JOHN BUNYAN.

PREFACE.

T was once superstitiously believed, by certain among the Papists, that the distribution of the works of departed holy men would increase their glory in heaven: our aim in reprinting this work is higher and far more likely to be gained, for we seek only the glory of the Lord Jesus. May the Lord answer the prayer with which we send forth these pages from the press, and make them useful in spreading abroad the savour of Immanuel's name. John Bunyan, a man whose shoe latchet few were worthy to unloose, a humble believer in Jesus, wrote the present treatise during the last year of his life, when he was on the confines of the New Jerusalem. The reader will find that his thoughts are matured by age, and yet they are expressed with all the vivacity of youth. Quaint in metaphor and plain in language, this is a true work of the Bedford Bishop and Tinker, and of none but he. He was unrivalled as a Boanerges, and could wield the thunderbolt most effectively, as many of his arousing and alarming works prove beyond all dispute;

but he excelled, and was most in his element when, as a Barnabas, he held out the cup of consolation, and pointed troubled consciences to the Cross of Christ. In this "Discourse upon the richness and glory of the grace and spirit of the gospel," there is such a display of the fulness and freeness of divine love, that if a seeking sinner shall read it with longing eyes, he can scarcely fail, with the divine blessing, to find rest. The silver ripple of the crystal waters is enough to enchant the mourner's ear and heart. The author speaks to despairing souls very tenderly, for he was once one himself, and knew how dark is the dungeon of doubt; yet his testimony is as bold as it is tender, he does not talk of unbelief as a mere infirmity, for he scruples not to say, that "to break the law is a fact foul enough, but to doubt the all-sufficiency of the grace of God to save therefrom, is worse than sin, if worse can be." It will be a happy day for the mourner when he can believe the infinity of the grace which is treasured up in Christ Jesus, and give over all sinful mistrusts and suspicions of the mercy of God.

If the reader should receive any degree of blessing in perusing this homely but precious treatise, as I think full sure he must, will he do the writer and the departed author this good turn—namely, lend the book to others, or better still, purchase a few copies, and give them to any who are in soul-distress, with the importunate prayer that a blessing may follow? If we cannot preach ourselves, let us set Bunyan in the pulpit, and none need desire a better substitute.

The time is short, and it behoveth us to use every opportunity, great or small, to win the sons of men from their vanities. Jesus is still to multitudes unknown, and his true followers should vex their hearts that he is so, and that because thereof hell hath enlarged herself; let us daily witness for Jesus and his gospel with tongue and pen in every place, and, as we watch for his coming, let us proclaim his salvation. Souls are our soul's hire, the saving of men is our present heaven; let us not sleep as do others, but give ourselves wholly to the work of God.

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "C. H. Spurgeon". The signature is written in dark ink and is positioned at the bottom right of the page, below the main body of text.

THE WATER OF LIFE.

“And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb.”—Rev. xxii. 1.

THESE words are part of that description that one of the seven angels, which had the seven vials full of the seven last plagues, gave unto John of the New Jerusalem, or of the state of that gospel church that shall be in the latter days. (Rev. xxi. 9.) Wherefore he saith, “And he showed me;” HE, the angel, showed me it.

In the text we have these things to consider of :

I. The matter, the subject matter of the text, and that is, The Water of Life. “He showed me the water of life.”

II. We have also here the quantity of this water showed to him, and that is, under the notion of a river. "He showed me a river of water of life."

III. He shows him also the head, or well-spring from whence this river of water of life proceeds, and that is, "the throne of God and of the Lamb." "He showed me a river of water of life, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb."

IV. We have also here the nature and quality of this water; it is pure, it is clear, as crystal. "And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb."

I. We will begin with the first of these, to wit, with THE MATTER, the subject matter of the text, which is, the water of life. These words, water of life, are metaphorical, or words by which a thing most excellent is presented to and amplified before our faces; and that thing is the Spirit of grace, the Spirit and grace of God. And the words, "Water of life," are words most apt to present it to us by; for what is more free than water; and what more beneficial, and more desirable than life? Therefore, I say, it is compared to, or called, the water of life. He showed me the water of life.

That it is the Spirit of grace, or the Spirit and grace of God, that is here intended: consider,

First, the Spirit of grace is in other places compared to water; and,

Secondly, it is also called the Spirit of life. Just as here it is presented to us, "He showed me the water of life."

1. The Spirit of grace is compared to water. "Whosoever," saith the Lamb, "drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him, a well of water springing up into everlasting life." (John iv. 14.) What can here by water be intended, but the Spirit of grace, that this poor harlot, the woman of Samaria wanted, although she was ignorant of her want, as also of the excellency thereof? which water is also here said to be such as will spring up in them that have it, as a well into everlasting life.

Again, "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink." But of what? why, of his rivers of living waters. But of what are they? why, he answers, "This spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive." (John vii. 37—39.)

Yea, the prophets and servants of God in the Old Testament, did take this water of life for the Spirit of grace that should in the latter days be poured out into the church. Hence, Isaiah calls water God's Spirit and blessing, and Zechariah calls it the Spirit of grace. "I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring." (Isa. xlv. 3.) And Zechariah saith, "I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications, and they shall mourn," &c. (Zech. xii. 10.) Behold, in all these places the Spirit of grace is intended, and for our better understanding, it is compared to water, to a well of water, to springs of water, and to floods of water.

2. It is also called the Spirit of life.

(1.) More closely. (2.) More openly.

(1.) More closely, where it is called "living water," "that living water," and "water springing up into everlasting life." (John iv. 10, 11, 14; vii. 38.)

(2.) Then more openly or expressly, it is called "the Spirit of life." "And after three days and an half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet." (Rev. xi. 11.)

From hence, therefore, I conclude, that by these terms, water of life, is meant the Spirit of grace, or the Spirit and grace of the gospel. And the terms are such as are most apt to set forth the Spirit and grace of the gospel by : for,

First, the term WATER.

1. By this term, water, an opposition to sin is presented unto us. Sin is compared to water, to deadly waters, and man is said to drink it, as one that drinketh waters. "How much more abominable and filthy is man, which drinketh iniquity like water?" (Job xv. 16.) So, then, that grace and the Spirit of grace is compared to water, it is to show what an antidote grace is against sin; it is, as I may call it, counter-poison to it. It is that only thing by the virtue of which sin can be forgiven, vanquished and overcome.

2. By this term water, you have an opposition also to the curse, that is due to sin, presented unto you. The curse is compared to water; the remedy is compared to water. "Let the curse come into his bowels like water," saith the psalmist. (Psalm cix. 18.) The grace of God also, as you see, is compared to water. The curse is burning; water is cooling: the curse doth burn with hell-fire; cooling is by the grace of the holy gospel: but they that overstand the day of grace, shall not obtain to cool their tongues so much of this water as will hang on the tip of one's finger. (Luke xvi. 24, 25.)

3. Water is also of a spreading nature, and so is sin; wherefore sin may, for this, also be compared to water. It overspreads the whole man, and infects every member; it covereth all, as doth water. Grace for this cause may be also compared to water, for that it is of a spreading nature, and can, if God will, cover the face of the whole earth; of body and soul.

4. Sin is of a fouling, defiling nature, and grace is of a washing, cleansing nature: therefore grace and the Spirit of grace is compared to water. "I will," says God, "sprinkle clean water upon you, (my Spirit, ver. 27.) and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you." (Ezek. xxxvi. 25.)

5. Water; the element of water, naturally descends to and abides in low places, in valleys and places which are undermost; and the grace of God, and the Spirit of grace, is of that nature also; the hills and lofty mountains have not the rivers running over the tops of them; no, though they may run "among them." But they run among the valleys; and "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble," "to the lowly." (1 Pet. v. 5; James iv. 6; Prov. iii. 34.)

6. The grace of God is compared to water, for that it is which causeth fruitfulness; water causeth fruitfulness, want of water is the cause of barrenness; and this is the reason why the whole world is so empty of fruit to Godward, even because so few of the children of men have the Spirit of grace in their hearts. But,

Second. The term LIFE.

As there is a special signification in this term, water, so there is also in this term, life, water of life. "He showed me the water of life." In that, therefore, there is added to this word, water, that of life, it is, in the general, to show what excellent virtue and operation there is in this water. It is aqua vitæ, water of life, or water that hath a health and life in it. And this term shows us,

1. That the world of graceless men are dead; "dead in trespasses and sins." (John v. 21, 25; Eph. ii. 1; Col. ii. 13.) Dead, that is, without life and motion God-ward in the way of the testament of his Son.

2. It also shows us that there is not anything in the world, or in the doctrine of the world, the law, that can make them live. Life is only in this water, death is in all other things. The law, I say, which would, if anything in the whole world, give life unto the world, but that yet killeth, condemneth, and was added that the offence might abound; wherefore there is no life either in the world, or in the doctrine of the world: it is only in this water, in this grace of God, which is here called the water of life, or God's aqua vitæ.

3. It is also called the water of life, to show that by the grace of God men may live, how dead soever their sins have made them. When God will say to a sinner, "live;" though he be dead in his sins, "he shall live." "When thou wast in thy blood, I said unto thee, Live: yea, when thou wast in thy blood, I said, Live." (Ezek. xvi. 6.) And again, "The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live." (John v. 25.) That is, when he speaks words of grace, and mixeth those words with the Spirit and grace of the gospel, then men shall live; for such words, so attended, and such words only, are spirit and life. "The words that I speak unto you," saith Christ, "they are spirit, and they are life." (John vi. 63.)

4. In that this grace of God is here presented unto us under the terms of water of life, it is to show, that some are sick of disease which nothing can cure but that. There are many diseases in the world, and there are also remedies for those diseases: but there is a disease that nothing will, can, or shall cure, but a dram of this bottle, a draught of this aqua vitæ, this water of life. This is intimated by the invitation: "let him take the water of life freely." (Rev. xxii. 17.) And again, "I will give to him that is athirst, of the fountain of water of life freely." (Rev. xxi. 6.) This is spoken to the sick, to them that are sick of the disease that only Christ, as a physician, with his water of life, can cure. (Mark ii. 17.)

But few are sick of this disease, but few know what it is to be made sick of this disease. There is nothing can make sick of this disease but the law and sin, and nothing can cure but the grace of God by the gospel, called here the water of life.

II. We come now to discourse of the second thing with which we are presented by the text: and that is, THE QUANTITY that there is of this water of life. It is A RIVER: "He showed me a river of the water of life." Waters that are cordial, and that have in them a faculty to give life to them that want it, and to maintain life where it is, are rare and scarce, and to be found only in close places, and little quantities; but here you see there is abundance, a great deal, a river, “a river of water of life.” In my handling of this point, I will show you,

First, What a river of water of life this is :

Secondly, And then draw some inferences therefrom.

First. What a river this is; this river of water of life.

1. It is a deep river. It is a river that is not shallow, but deep, with an “O the depth!” (Romans xi. 33.) “I will make their waters deep,” saith God. (Ezekiel xxxii. 14.) And again, they “have drunk of the deep waters.” (Ezekiel xxxiv. 18.) A river of water of life is much; but a deep river is more. Why, soul-sick sinner, sin-sick sinner, thou that art sick of that disease that nothing can cure, but a potion of this river of the water of life, here is a river for thee, a deep river for thee. Those that at first are coming to God by Christ for life are of nothing so inquisitive, as of whether there is grace enough in Him to save them. But, for their comfort, here is abundance, abundance of grace, a river, a deep river of the water of life for them to drink of.

2. As the river is deep, so it is wide and broad. (Eph. iii. 18.) Wherefore as thou art to know the depth, that is, that it is deep; so thou art to know its breadth, that is, that it is broad. (Job xi. 9.) It is "broader than the sea;" "a river that cannot be passed over." (Ezekiel xlvii. 5.) Never did man yet go from one side of this river to the other, when the waters indeed were risen; and now they are risen, even now they proceed out of the throne of God and of the Lamb too. Hence this grace is called "the unsearchable riches of Christ." (Eph. iii. 8.) Sinner, sick sinner, what sayest thou to this? wouldst thou wade, wouldst thou swim? here thou mayest swim; it is deep, yet fordable at first entrance. And when thou thinkest that thou hast gone through and through it, yet turn again and try once more, and thou shalt find it deeper than hell, and a river that cannot be passed over. If thou canst swim, here thou mayest roll up and down, as the fishes do in the sea. Nor needest thou fear drowning in this river; it will bear thee up, and carry thee over the highest hills, as Noah's waters did carry the ark. But,

3. As this river of water of life is deep and large; so it is a river that is full of waters. A river may be deep and not full. A river may be broad and not deep. Ay, but here is a river deep, and broad, and full too. "Thou waterest it: thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water." (Psalm lxxv. 9.) Full of grace and truth. Fill the water-pots, saith Christ, up to the brim. The waters of a full cup the wicked shall have, and a river full of the water of life is provided for those who indeed have a desire thereto.

4. As this river is deep, broad, and full, so it still aboundeth with water. "The waters," says the prophet, "were risen." (Ezekiel xlvii. 5.) Hence the Holy Ghost saith, God causeth the waters to flow. (Psalm cxlvii. 18.) And again, "And it shall come to pass in that day (the day of the gospel) that the mountains shall drop down with new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall come forth of the house of the Lord, and shall water the valley of Shittim." (Joel iii. 18.) When a river overflows, it has more water than its banks can bound : it has water. "Behold, he smote the rock, that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed." (Psalm lxxviii. 20.)

This river of water of life, which is also signified by these waters, is a river that abounds, and that overflows its banks in an infinite and unspeakable manner. Thus much for the river, to wit, what a river of water of life it is. It is a river deep, broad, full, and abounding with this water, with this Spirit and grace of the gospel.

Secondly, now I shall come to draw some inferences from it, that is, from this term, a river. A river of water of life.

1. Then, a river, is water that is common, common in the streams, though otherwise in the head. This river proceeds out of the throne, and so, as to its rise, it is special; it is also called the water of life; and as it is such, it is special; but as it is a river, it is common, and for common use, and for common good. Hence the grace of God is called, "The common salvation," (Jude 3) for that by the word there is no restraint, no denial to, or forbidding of any that will, from the receiving thereof.

“And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.” (Rev. xxii. 17.) What can more fully declare the commonness of a thing? Yea, this river is called at the very head of it, an “Open Fountain,” “a fountain opened to the house of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem.” (Zech. xiii. 1.) And by Judah and Jerusalem is comprehended every soul that would drink of the water of life or living water. And hence it is, that this river is said to “go down into the desert, and go into the sea,” (Ezekiel xlvii. 8) where all kinds of fishes are. By sea is meant the world, and by fish the people, and thither shall run this river of water of life. But,

2. Though a river, in the streams of it, is common, yet a river, as it passes through a country or province, will choose its own way. It will also fetch its compasses and circuits; it will go about and reach hither and thither; and according to its courses it will miss by its turnings what places and people it lists; yet it is common, for that it lies open; yet it is common for all the beasts of the field. There is, therefore, a difference to be put betwixt the commonness of a thing and its presence. A thing may be common, yet far enough off from thee. Epsom, Tunbridge Wells, and Bath may be common, but yet a great way off from some that have need thereof. The same may be said of this river; it is common in the streams, but it runs its own circuit, and keeps its own water-courses. "He sendeth the springs into the valleys, which run among the hills." (Psalm civ. 10.) Indeed, he openeth his river in high places, in his throne, and of the Lamb, but still they run in the midst of the valleys to water the humble and the lowly. Wherefore, they that thirst, and would drink, are bid to come down to the waters; "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters; and he that hath no money, come ye, buy," &c. (Isaiah lv. 1.) And again, "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." (John vii. 37.) The waters are common, but you must come to them, to them where they are, or you will be nothing the better for them. "Come ye to the waters."

3. This water of life is called a river, to intimate to you, by what store of the same it is supplied. All rivers have the sea for their original: "All the rivers run into the sea, yet the sea is not full: unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again." (Eccles. i. 7.) And so this river of water of life is said to proceed out of the throne, as out of a place where it breaketh out, but the original is the sea, the ocean of grace, which is an infinite Deity. "Thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea," (Mic. vii. 19,) into the depths of the sea of thy grace. Rivers, when they are broken up, do with their gliding streams carry away a great deal of the filth, which from all parts of the countries through which they run is conveyed into them; and they carry it away into the sea, where it is everlastingly swallowed up. And oh! the filth that is cast into this river of God! and oh! how many dirty sinners are washed white therein! for by its continual gliding away, it carrieth that filth into the midst of the sea.

A river will take away the very stink of a dead dog, nor doth all the soil and draught that is cast into the rivers, cause that those that can should be afraid to make use thereof; all that have need do betake themselves to this river notwithstanding. But how much more virtue is there in this sweet river of grace that is designed, yea, opened on purpose, to wash away sin and uncleanness in, to carry away all our filth, and to remain as virtuous still!

4. It is called a river, to show that it yields a continual supply, as I may call it, of new and fresh grace. Rivers yield continually fresh and new water. For though the channel or water-course in which the water runs is the same, yet the waters themselves are always new. That water that but one minute since stood in this place or that of the river, is now gone, and new and fresh is come in its place. And thus it is with the river of God, which is full of water; it yieldeth continually fresh supplies, fresh and new supplies of grace to those that have business in these waters. And this is the reason that when sin is pardoned, it seems as if it were carried away. Those waters have, with their continual streams, carried away the filth of the sinner from before his face. It is not so with ponds, pools, and cisterns; they will often be foul and stink, if they be not often emptied, and filled again with fresh water. We must then put a difference between the grace that dwelleth in us, and this river of water of life. We are but as ponds, pools, and cisterns that can hold but little, and shall also soon stink notwithstanding the grace of God is in us, if we be not often "emptied from vessel to vessel," (Jer. xlviii. 11) and filled with fresh grace from this river. But the river is always sweet, nor can all the filth that is washed out of the world make it stink, or infect it: its water runs with a continual gliding stream, and so carries away all annoyance, as was said, into the depths of the sea.

5. The grace of God is called a river, to show that it is only suited to those who are capable of living therein. Water, though it is that which every creature desireth, yet it is not an element in which every creature can live. Who is it that would not have the benefit of grace, of a throne of grace? But who is it that can live by grace? Even none but those whose temper and constitution is suited to grace.

Hence, as the grace of God is compared to a river, so those that live by grace are compared to fish, for that, as water is that element in which the fish liveth, so grace is that which is the life of the saint. "And there shall be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters shall come thither; for they shall be healed, and every thing shall live whither the river cometh." (Ezekiel xlvii. 9.) Art thou a fish, man, art thou a fish? Canst thou live in the water? canst thou live always, and nowhere else but in the water? Is grace thy proper element? The fish dieth if she be taken out of the water, unless she be timely put in again: the saint dieth if he be not in this river. Take him from this river, and nothing can make him live; let him have water, water of life enough, and nothing can make him die.

I know that there are some things besides fish, that can make a shift to live in the water; but the water is not their proper, their only proper element. The frog can live in the water, but not in the water only; the otter can live in the water, but not in the water only. Give some men grace and the world, grace and sin ; admit them to make use of their lusts for pleasure, and of grace to remove their guilt, and they will make a pretty good shift, as we say ; they will finely scramble on in a profession ; but hold them to grace only, confine their life to grace, put them into the river, and let them have nothing but river, and they die ; the word, and way, and nature of grace, is to them as light bread, and their soul can do no other but loathe it ; for they are not suited and tempered for that element. They are fish, not frogs, that can live in the river, as in their only proper element ; wherefore the grace of God, and Spirit of grace, is compared to a river, to show that none but those can live thereby, whose souls and spirits are suited and fitted thereto.

6. The grace, and Spirit of grace of God, is called or compared to a river, to answer those unsatiable desires, and to wash away those mountainous doubts, which attend those that indeed do thirst for that drink. The man that thirsteth with spiritual thirst, fears nothing more than that there is not enough to quench his thirst. All the promises and sayings of God's ministers to such a man, seem but as thimbles instead of bowls. (Psalm xlii. 2; lxiii. 1; cxliii. 6.) I mean so long as his thirst and doubts walk hand in hand together. There is not enough in this promise; I find not enough in that promise to quench the drought of my thirsting soul. He that thirsteth aright, nothing but God can quench his thirst. "My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God." Well, what shall be done for this man? Will his God humour him and answer his desires? Mark what follows: "When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none," (and they can find none, when all the promises seem to be dry, and like clouds that return after the rain,) "and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them." Ay, but, Lord, what wilt thou do to quench their thirst? "I will open rivers," saith he, "in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys. I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water." (Isaiah xli. 17, 18.) Behold! here are rivers and fountains, a pool and springs, and all to quench the thirst of them that thirst for God.

Wherefore, as I said, such provision for the thirsty intimates their fears of want, and the craving appetite of their souls after God. Right spiritual thirst is not to be satisfied without abundance of grace. And "they shall be abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house, and thou shalt make them drink of the river of thy pleasures." (Psalm xxxvi. 8.)

7. The grace of God is compared to a river, to show the greatness of the family of God. He has a family, a great family, and therefore it is not a little that must be provided for them. When Israel went out of Egypt, and thirsted by the way, God provided for them a river, he made it gush out of the rock; for alas! what less than a river could quench the thirst of more than six hundred thousand men, besides women and children? (Psalm lxxviii. 20.)

I say, what less than a river could do it? When the people lusted for flesh, Moses said, "Shall the flocks and the herds be slain for them, to suffice them? or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together for them, to suffice them?" Num. xi. 22.) Even so could not less than a river sustain and suffice that great people. Now his people in gospel days are not to be diminished, but increased; and if then they had need of a river, surely now of a sea; but the river is deep and broad, full, and abounds, or rises with water, so it will suffice.

8. The grace of God is compared to a river, perhaps to show of what a low esteem it is with the rich and the full. The destitute indeed embrace the rock instead of a shelter, and the poor and needy, they seek water; but they that can drink wine in bowls, that can solace themselves with, as they think, better things, they come not to this river to drink; they never say they shall die if they drink not of this water. It is therefore for the poor and needy, God will lead them to his "living fountains of waters," and will "wipe away all tears from their eyes." (Rev. vii. 17.) And thus I pass the second, and come to the third particular, and that is, to show the head and spring from whence this river proceeds, or springs.

III. Rivers have their heads from whence they rise, out of which they spring; and so, accordingly, we read this river has; wherefore he saith, "He showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb."

God is here to be taken for the whole Godhead, Father, Son, and Spirit, for that grace proceeds from them all; the grace of the Father, the grace of the Son, and grace of the Spirit is here included. Hence, as the Father is called, "the God of grace;" (1 Pet. v. 10;) so the Son is said to be "full of grace," grace to be communicated; (John i. 14—16;) and the Holy Ghost is called, "the Spirit of grace." (Heb. x. 29.) So then by this we perceive whence grace comes. Were all the world gracious, if God were not gracious, what was man the better? If the Father, or the Son, or the Holy Ghost were gracious, if they were not all gracious, what would it profit? But now God is gracious, the three persons in the Godhead are gracious, and so long they that seek grace are provided for; for that there proceeds from them a river, or grace like a flowing stream; indeed the original of grace to sinners is the good will of God: none can imagine how loving God is to sinful man. A little of it is seen, but they that see most, see but a little.

But there is added, "and of the Lamb." The Lamb is Jesus as sacrificed, Jesus as man, and suffering. Hence you have the Lamb, at the first vision of the throne set forth unto us, that is, as slain. "And I beheld, and lo, in the midst of the throne and of the four beasts, and in the midst of the elders, stood a Lamb as it had been slain." (Rev. v. 6.)

Wherefore, by this word Lamb, we are to understand how, or by what means, grace doth now run from the throne of God, like a river to the world. It is because of, or through the Lamb. We are "justified freely by the grace of God, through the redemption that is in Jesus Christ, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood." (Rom. iii. 24.) And again, "We have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of God's grace." (Eph. i. 7.)

Nor doth the Lamb of God, by becoming a means, through death, of the conveyance of grace to us, at all darken the nature or glory of grace, but rather doth set it off the more. For wherein can grace or love more appear, than in his laying down his life for us? I speak now of the grace of the Son. And wherein could the nature and glory of grace of the Father more appear than in giving his Son to death for us, that grace might, in a way of justice as well as mercy, be bestowed upon the world? Wherefore, as he saith here, that the river of water of life proceedeth from God, so he adds, "and of the Lamb," because he would have us, while we are entangled and overcome with this river of God's pleasure, not forget what it cost the Lamb of God that this grace might come unto us.

For the riches of grace and of wisdom are, that grace comes to us not only by a way of mercy and compassion, but in the way of justice and equity; but that could be by no other means but by redeeming blood. Which redeeming blood came not from us, nor yet through our contrivance or advice: wherefore, whatever it is to the Lamb, still all is of grace to us. Yea, the higher, the greater, the richer is grace, by how much the more it cost the Father and the Lamb that we might enjoy it. When a man shall not only design me a purse of gold, but shall venture his life to bring it me, this is grace indeed. But alas! what are a thousand such short comparisons to the unsearchable love of Christ.

The Lamb, then, is he from whom, by or through whom, the grace of God doth come to us. It proceeds from the throne of God and of the Lamb. And it proceeds from him now as a donator; from him, not only as a means of conveyance, but as one that has power to give grace; power, as he is the Son of man. For as the Son of man, he is the Lamb; and as he is the Lamb it cometh from him. "The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins," (Matt. ix. 6,) and that before he had actually paid to God the price of our redemption. But how much more now? Wherefore Paul, in his prayer for grace and peace for saints, supplicates both God and the Lamb. "Grace be to you from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ." (Eph. i. 2. 1 Cor. i. 3. Gal. i. 3.)

"Proceeding out of the throne." Formerly this river of waters is said to come from under the threshold of the house of the Lord. (Ezek. xlvii. 1.) And it is said again, "they shall go out from Jerusalem;" that is the church or house of God still. (Zech. xiv. 8.) In that they are said to come out from under the threshold, it may be to intimate that they ran but low formerly, if compared to what they do now. Which might also be signified by this, that they "issued out;" that which issues out ordinarily comes forth but slowly. Also the prophet saith, the first time he went through the waters they were but up to his ancles. (Ezek. xlvii. 3, 4.) But what is ancle-deep to that which followeth after? It is said also to come out from Jerusalem, where, I perceive, were no great rivers; to intimate that as long as the first priesthood, first temple, and type, were in their splendour, only the shadow of heavenly things was in use, and that then grace ran but slowly, nor would run much faster, because Jesus was not yet glorified. For the Spirit and abundance of grace was to be given not before, but after his ascension.

Wherefore, now Jesus is ascended, now he is glorified, now grace proceeds "from the throne," not from the threshold of the house. "He showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding" from or "out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb."

The throne. That of which the mercy-seat was a type, that which is called the throne of grace. (Exod. xxv. 17.) And it is called the throne of grace, (Heb. iv. 16,) even therefore, because it is that from or out of which proceeds this river of water of life, this overflowing grace of God. Now it may be asked, what is the throne of grace? and I shall answer, it is the humanity of Christ. He is the throne, he is the Jacob in which God sitteth. And he shall be for a glorious throne to his father's house. (Isa. xxii. 22, 23.) The fulness of the Godhead dwells in him bodily: and God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, nor can grace come to men but by Christ, nor can God rest as to our salvation but in him. But because I have spoken of this thing more particularly upon that text, "Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace," &c., I shall therefore here say no more.

Only, methinks, it is a glorious title that the Holy Ghost has given to the humanity of Christ, in that he calls it the throne of God; and methinks he gives it the highest preference, in that he saith, out thence proceeds a pure river of water of life: we will a little therefore speak something to this word the Throne, the Throne of God.

1. A throne is the seat of majesty and greatness: it is not for things of an inferior quality to ascend or assume a throne. Now, then, since this river of water of life proceeds from the throne, it intimates that in grace and mercy there is great majesty; for grace, as it proceeds, has a voice from the throne. And indeed there is nothing in heaven or earth that can so awe the heart, as the grace of God. (Hosea iii. 5.) It is that which makes a man fear, it is that which makes a man tremble, it is that which makes a man bow and bend, and break to pieces. (Jer. xxxiii. 9.) Nothing has that majesty and commanding greatness in and upon the hearts of the sons of men as has the grace of God.

So that, I say, when he saith that this river of grace proceeds out of the throne of God; it is to show us what a majesty, what a commanding greatness, there is in grace. "The love of Christ constraineth us."

When Moses went up to the mount the first time to receive the law, he did exceedingly fear and quake. Why? because of the fire and smoke, thick darkness and thunder, &c. But when he went up the second time thither, "he made haste and bowed his head towards the earth, and worshipped." But why? because it was before proclaimed, that "the Lord was merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth: keeping mercy for thousands, forgiving iniquity, and transgression, and sin," &c. (Exod. xxxiv. 6—9.)

There is nothing over-mastereth the heart like grace, and so obligeth to sincere and unfeigned obedience as that. "Examine me, O Lord," said David, "and prove me, and try my reins and my heart, for thy loving-kindness is before my eyes, and I have walked in thy truth." (Psal. xxvi. 2, 3.) Therefore he saith again, O Lord our God, "how excellent is thy loving-kindness" in all the earth! and that loving-kindness is marvellous, for it has that majesty, and that excellent glory in it, as to command the heart and subdue sin. And therefore grace has given to it the title of sovereignty, or of one that reigns. The throne is called, "the throne of grace," (Heb. iv. 16,) that on which it sits and reigns, as well as that from whence it proceeds: "Grace reigns through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord." (Rom. v. 21.)

2. As a throne is a seat of majesty and greatness, and so can awe; so it is the seat of authority and legislative power, and so will awe; this is confirmed from what was said but now, —"grace reigns." Wherefore it is expected, that they that hear the word of God's grace should submit thereto, and that at their peril. "He that believes not shall be damned" is a word of power, of law and authority; and the contemner shall find it so. Grace proceeds from the throne, from the throne of God, and of the Lamb. Wherefore, sinner, here is laid a necessity upon thee, one of the two must be thy lot; either thou must accept of God's grace, and be content to be saved freely thereby, notwithstanding all thy undeservings, and unworthiness, or else thou must be damned for thy rebellion, and for thy rejecting of this grace. Wherefore, consider with thyself, and think what is best to be done. Is it better that thou submit to the grace and mercy of God, and that thou accept of grace to reign for thee, in thee, and over thee, than that thou shouldst run the hazard of eternal damnation, because thou wouldst not be saved by grace? Consider this, I say, for grace is now in authority, it reigns and proceeds from the THRONE. Now you know, it is dangerous opposing, rejecting, despising, or disowning of those in authority: better speak against twenty, than against one that is in authority. If "the wrath of a king is as messengers of death;" (Prov. xvi. 14;) if the wrath of the king "is as the roaring of a lion;" what is the wrath of God? (Prov. xix. 12.) And you know, to despise grace, to refuse pardon, to be unwilling to be saved from the guilt and punishment due to treasons, the king's way, since that also is the best way, how will that provoke! how hot will that make wrath! But to accept of grace, especially when it is free grace, grace that reigns, grace from the throne; how sweet is it! "His favour is as dew upon the grass."

This therefore calls for thy most grave and sedate thoughts. Thou art in a strait, wilt thou fly before Moses, or with David fall into the hands of the Lord? wilt thou go to hell for sin, or to life by grace? One of the two, as was said before, must be thy lot; for grace is king, is upon the throne, and will admit of no other way to glory. In and by it thou must stand, if thou hast any hope, or canst at all "rejoice in hope of the glory of God." (Rom. v. 2.)

3. As the throne is the seat of majesty and authority, so it is the highest seat of authority. There is none above the throne, there is no appeal from the throne. There are inferior courts of judicature, there are under-governors, and they may sometimes perhaps be faulty; wherefore in some cases an appeal from such may be lawful or permitted; but from the throne none can appeal. Now grace is upon the throne, reigns upon the throne, proceeds from the throne. A man may appeal from the law to the throne, from Moses to Christ, from him that spake on earth to him that speaks from heaven; but from heaven to earth, from Christ to Moses, none can appeal. Moses himself has forbid it. For "Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.” (Acts iii. 22, 23.)

See here, this new prophet judges in the highest court; he is master of grace, the throne by which grace reigns; and even Moses admits that from himself an appeal may be made to this prophet: yea, he allows that men may flee from himself to this prophet for refuge: but there must be no appeal from him. Thou must hear him or die. How shall we escape, “if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven?” (Heb. xii. 25.)

This, therefore, is to be duly weighed, and deeply considered by us. It is not a saint, nor a minister, nor a prophet, nor an angel that speaks, for all these are but servants, but inferiors: no, it is a voice from the throne, from authority, from the highest authority; it is the Lord from heaven. This grace proceeds from the throne, and therefore men must stand and fall by what shall come from hence. He that comes not hither to drink, shall die of thirst. He that refuses this water now, shall not have so much as will hang upon the tip of his finger, if it would save his soul, hereafter. "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation." (Heb. ii. 3.)

Apostates will, therefore, from hence find griping pangs and burning coals, for they have turned themselves away from this throne, and from the grace that proceeds therefrom; nor is it to any purpose whatever they plead for themselves. They are fallen from grace, and what can help them? Christ is become of none effect unto such, whosoever is, that is, seeks to be justified, by the law; "they are fallen from grace." (Gal. v. 4.)

4. The throne is the seat of glory. "When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him; then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory." (Matt. xxv. 31.) And if the throne of judgment is the seat of glory, much more the throne of grace. We will venture then to say, that the throne of grace is the throne of God's glory, as the throne of judgment will be the throne of Christ's glory, and that grace proceedeth from his throne, that both it and he might have glory; glory in a way of mercy.

(1.) That it might have glory ; therefore has he designed, that grace shall be effectual in, and to the salvation of some ; even “to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in his Beloved.” (Eph. i. 6.)

He has designed, not the glory of man’s works, but the glory of his own grace ; and therefore has put man’s works, as to justification before God, under his feet, and counts them as filthy rags ; but has set his grace up above, has made it a king, given it authority to reign, has provided for it a throne, and called that throne the throne of grace, from whence it also proceeds to its own praise and glory, in and by the effectual salvation of those that receive it, and receive it not in vain.

(2.) As grace is exalted, and made to proceed out of the throne to its own praise, to its own glory, so is it also thus exalted and made to flow to us like a river, that we should be the praise and the glory of him that hath exalted it. We that receive it, and submit unto the throne whence it proceeds, have thereby “obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will, that we should be to the praise of his glory." (Eph. i. 11, 12.) So that this throne is a throne of glory. "A glorious high throne from the beginning is the place of our sanctuary." Now what follows from this, but that they that accept of this grace give glory to God, to his grace, and to the word of his grace; such I say, "glorify God for his mercy." (Rom. xv. 9.) They glorify God by their professed subjection to the gospel of Christ, (2 Cor. ix. 13,) which is the gospel or good tidings "of the grace of God." (Acts xx. 24.) They, with Abraham, believe, and give glory to God, (Rom. iv. 20,) and with the Gentiles they glorify the word of the Lord. (Acts xiii. 48.)

But to slight grace, to do despite to the Spirit of grace, to prefer our own works to the derogating from grace, what is it but to condemn God? to condemn him when he is on the throne, when he is on the throne of his glory? I say it is to spit in his face even when he commands thee to bow before him, to subject unto him, and to glorify the grace of his glory, that proceeds from the throne of his glory.

If men in old time were damned because they glorified him not as God; shall they not be more than damned, if more than damned can be, who glorify him not for his grace? And, to be sure, none glorify him for his grace but those that close in therewith, and submit themselves thereto. Talkers of grace are but mockers of God, flatterers of God. Those that only talk highly of grace, and submit not themselves unto it, are but those that praise a look, or flatter him in his own conceits. Grace, God has exalted, has set upon the throne, and so made it a king, and given it authority to reign; and thou goest by and hearest thereof, but wilt not submit thyself thereto, neither thy soul, nor thy life: why, what is this more than to flatter God with thy lips, and then to lie unto him with thy tongue? what is this but to count him less wise than thyself, while he seeks glory by that by which thou wilt not glorify him; while he displays his grace before thee in the world from the throne, and as thou goest by, with a nod thou callest it a fine thing, but followest that which leadeth therefrom? Tremble, tremble, ye sinners, that have despised the richness of his goodness. The day is coming when ye shall behold, and wonder, and perish, if grace prevaileth not with you to be content to be saved by it to the praise of its glory, (Acts xiii. 38—41,) and to the glory of him who hath set it upon the throne.

5. The throne is the seat of wisdom. Hence, he is called “the Ancient of days,” that sits on this throne, the throne of God, infinite in wisdom, whose garments were white as snow, and the hair of his head is like pure wool. (Dan. vii. 9.) By “Ancient of days,” and in that it is said the hair of his head is like the pure wool, his wisdom is set forth unto us. Wherefore, when we read that out of the throne proceeds a river of grace, when we read this proceedeth out of the throne of God, it is as much as to say, the wise God, who most perfectly knoweth all ways, counteth, in his wisdom, that to save men by grace is the best, most safe, and sure way. “Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace, to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed.” (Rom. iv. 16.) And again, forgiveness is according to the riches of his grace, wherein he hath abounded towards us in all wisdom and prudence. (Eph. i. 7, 8.) Wherefore, to set grace upon the throne, to let grace proceed out of the throne as a river, is by the wise God, the only wise God, counted the best way, the safest way, the way that doth best suit the condition of a sinful man, and that tends most to the utter disappointment of the devil, and death, and hell. Grace can justify freely, when it will, whom it will, from what it will. Grace can continue to pardon, favour, and save from falls, in falls, out of falls. Grace can comfort, relieve, and help those that have hurt themselves. And grace can bring the unworthy to glory. This the law cannot do, this man cannot do, this angels cannot do, this God cannot do, but only by the riches of his grace, through the redemption that is in Jesus Christ. Wherefore, seeing God has set grace on the throne, and ordered that it should proceed from this throne to the world, yea, seeing he has made it king, and granted to it, to it only, authority and sovereignty of saving souls, he has magnified, not only his love, but his wisdom and his prudence before the sons of men. (2 Sam. xiv. 14. Prov. viii. 11, 12.) This then is his great device, the master-piece of all his witty inventions; and therefore it is said, as was hinted before, in this thing he hath proceeded towards us in all wisdom and prudence.

So then, he that comes to, and drinks of this water, glorifies God for his wisdom, praises God for his wisdom. Such a one saith, that God is only wise, and bowing his head, saith again, "to God only wise, be glory, both now and for ever, Amen."

But he that shall condemn this grace, confronts the highest wisdom, even wisdom upon the throne; he saith of himself, I am wiser than Daniel, than the judgment of God. I could have found out a more safe way to heaven myself, and had I been of God's council I would have told him so. All this so horrible blasphemy naturally proceeds from him that liketh not that grace should be king on the throne, and should proceed out of the throne to the world; but "shall he that contendeth with the Almighty instruct him? He that reproveth God, let him answer it." (Job xl. 2.)

The text says, that this very doctrine to the Greeks, to the wise, is foolishness, and the preaching of it a foolish thing to them; but will appear even then, when the conclusion of all things is come, and when these wise ones by their wisdom have fooled themselves to hell, that this "foolishness of God is wiser than men, and the weakness of God is stronger than men." (1 Cor. i. 21—25.)

Christ Jesus, because he was low in the world, is trampled upon by some, but he is a glorious throne to his Father's house: for since his humility was the lowest of all, now he is exalted to be the throne of God, yea, is made the fountain whence grace continually flows like the rivers, and comes down to us like a mighty stream. Wherefore, I will conclude this with both comfort and caution; with comfort, and that because of the security that they are under that indeed have submitted themselves to grace,—"sin shall not have dominion over you, for ye are not under the law, but under grace." And let it be a caution to those that despise. Take heed, it is dangerous affronting the wisdom of God. Now here is the wisdom of God, even wisdom upon the throne. It pleased God, for the glory of his wisdom, to make this the way; to wit, to set up grace to reign. I have often thought, and sometimes said, if God will be pleased with any way, surely he will be pleased with his own. Now this is the way of his own devising, the fruit and effect of his own wisdom: wherefore, sinner, please him, please him in that wherein he is well pleased. Come to the waters, cast thyself into them, and fear not drowning: let God alone to cause them to carry thee into his paradise, that thou mayest see his throne.

6. The throne is the seat of faithfulness, the place of performing of engagements and promises. "When I shall receive the congregation," saith Christ, "I will judge uprightly," that is faithfully. (Psalm lxxv. 2.) And now he has received it, and is made head over all things to it. (Eph. i. 22, 23.) And for this cause is he upon the throne, yea, is the throne from whence proceeds all this grace that like a river doth flow and glide from heaven into the world. This river, then, is nothing else but the fulfilling of promises: "If I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you ; but if I depart, I will send him unto you." (John xvi. 7.) "This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel ; And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh," &c. (Acts ii. 16—18.) Now this river is the Spirit, the Spirit and grace of God, which was promised by the Father and the Son, and now it comes running "from the throne of God and of the Lamb." For, "being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Spirit, he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear." (Acts ii. 33.)

Behold, then, how mindful, how careful, how faithful our Father and the Lamb of God is ! It is not exaltation, nor a crown, nor a kingdom, nor a throne, that shall make him neglect his poor ones on earth. Yea, therefore, even because he is exalted and on the throne, therefore it is that such a river with its golden streams, proceeds from the throne to come unto us. And it shall proceed to be far higher than ever were the swellings of Jordan. True, it runs not so high now, as in former days, because of the curse of God upon Antichrist, by whose means the land of God's people is full of briars and thorns; (Isa. xxxii. 13—17;) but when the tide is at the lowest, then it is nearest the rising; and this river will rise, and in a little time be no more so low as but ancle-deep; it will be up to the knees, to the loins, and be a broad river to swim in. (Ezek. xlvii.) For "there the glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams," (Isa. xxxiii. 21,) and there shall be no more curse in the church; "but the throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it, and his servants shall serve him" without molestation. (Rev. xxii. 3, 6.)

"These sayings are faithful and true," and in faithfulness shall they, from the throne of God and of the Lamb, be performed to the church. Faithfulness in him that rules is that which makes Sion rejoice, because thereby the promises yield milk and honey. For now the faithful God, that keepeth covenant, performs to his church that which he told her he would. Wherefore, our rivers shall run, and our brooks yield honey and butter. (Job xx. 17.)

Let this teach all God's people to expect, to look, and wait for good things from the throne. But oh! methinks, this throne, out of which good comes like a river! who would not but be a subject to it? who would not but worship before it? But,

7. A throne is the seat of justice. "Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne." (Psalm lxxxix. 14.) And it is also from justice that this river of grace flows to us; justice to Christ, and justice to those that are found in him: God declares that he can justly justify, and justly forgive. (1 John i. 9.) Now, if he can justly justify and justly forgive, then he can give grace, and cause that it should proceed to, yea, flow after us as a river. The river that gushed out of the rock in the wilderness ran after the people there, wherefore they wandered therein. They drank of the rock that followed them; the rock was not removed out of his place, but the flood followed them whither they went. (1 Cor. x. 4.) "He opened the rock, and the waters gushed out; they ran in dry places like a river." (Psalm cv. 41.)

This rock, saith he, was Christ, that is figuratively: and this throne is Christ really, and the water gushing out of the rock, and following of them in the wilderness was to show how when Christ became a throne, grace and goodness should follow us in the wilderness from thence so long as here we abide. Wherefore David, considering this, said, "Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever." (Psalm xxiii. 6.)

But whence must this come? The text says from the throne, the seat of justice; for from thence, by reason of what he hath found in Christ for us, he, in a way of righteousness and justice, lets out to us rivers of his pleasures; whose original is that great and wide sea of mercy that flows in his infinite heart beyond thought.

All is paid for both us and grace. We are bought with a price. (1 Cor. vi. 20.) He has obtained eternal redemption for us. (Heb. ix. 12.) Yea, and as we are made his, and heaven made ours thus, so this river of grace has been also obtained by him for us. (John vii. 38.) Wherefore, all this comes to us in a way of justice and righteousness. Hence we are said to obtain "faith through the righteousness of God;" (2 Pet. i. 1;) that is, through the justice of God, and of Jesus our Lord. Mark, here is the justice of God, and the justice of Jesus Christ our Lord, and we have our faith from the justice of God, because of the righteousness of Jesus Christ our Lord; that is, Jesus answered with works of justice the demands of justice; and therefore in a way of justice, grace reigns and comes to us like a river, as is signified, for that it is said to come to us out of the throne.

Again, grace is said to "reign through righteousness unto eternal life." (Rom.v.21.) Through what righteousness? the righteousness or justice of God by Jesus Christ our Lord. By Jesus Christ, or for his sake. For his sake, as I said, we are forgiven; and for his sake have all things pertaining to life and godliness. Which all things come to us through, or down, the stream of this river in a way of justice, and therefore it is said to come from the throne.

8. This throne is the seat of grace and mercy, and therefore it is called the mercy-seat and throne of grace. This throne turns all into grace, all into mercy ! This throne makes all things work together for good. It is said of Saul's sons, they were not buried after they were hanged, until water dropped upon them out of heaven. (2 Sam. xxi. 10, 14.) And it may be said of us, there is nothing suffered to come near us, until it is washed in that water that proceeds from the throne of grace. Hence afflictions flow from grace ; persecutions flow from grace ; poverty, sickness, yea, death itself is now made ours by the grace of God through Christ. (Psalm cxix. 67. 1 Cor. iii. 22. Rev. iii. 19. Heb. xii. 5—7.) O grace ! O happy church of God ! All things that happen to thee are, for Christ's sake, turned into grace. They talk of the philosopher's stone, and how, if one had it, it would turn all things into gold. Oh ! but can it turn all things into grace ? can it make all things work together for good ? No, no ; this quality, virtue, excellency, what shall I call it ? nothing has in it, but the grace that reigns on the throne of grace ; the river that proceeds from the throne of God. This, this turns majesty, authority, the highest authority, glory, wisdom, faithfulness, justice, and all into grace. Here is a throne! God, let us see it. John had the honour to see it, and to see the streams proceeding from it. Oh, sweet sight! Oh, heart-ravishing sight! "He showed me a pure river of water of life, proceeding out of the throne of God."

Indeed, as was hinted before, in the days of the reign of Antichrist there are not those visions of this throne, nor of the river that proceedeth therefrom. Now he holdeth back the face of his throne, and spreadeth a cloud upon it: but the preserving, saving benefits thereof we have, as also have all the saints in the most cloudy and dark day. And since we can see so little, we must believe the more; and by believing, give glory to God. We must also labour for more clear Scripture knowledge of this throne; for the holy Word of God is the perspective glass, by which we may, and the magnifying-glass that will cause us to behold, "with open face, the glory of the Lord." (2 Cor. iii. 18.)

But, methinks, I have yet said nothing of this throne, which is indeed none other but the spotless and glorified humanity of the Son of God. This throne is the Lord Jesus, this grace comes from the Divine Majesty as dwelling bodily in the Lord Jesus. Wherefore let us fall down before the throne, and cast our crowns at the foot of the throne, and give thanks to him that sits upon the throne, and to the Lamb for ever and ever.

Oh, how should Jesus be esteemed of ! The throne of the king is a royal seat. It is said of Solomon's, "there was not the like made in any kingdom." (1 Kings x. 20.) But of this it may be said, there is not its like in heaven and earth. At the setting up of this throne the angels flocked round about it, and the beasts and the elders gathered together to see it. (Rev. iv. 1—8.) When this throne was set in heaven there was silence, all the heavenly host had no leisure to talk : they were surprised with sight and wonder. When this throne was set in heaven, what talk there was ! it was as the music of the trumpet.

"And behold," says John, "a door was opened in heaven ; and the first voice that I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me, which said, Come up hither, and I will show thee things which must be hereafter. And immediately I was in the spirit, and behold, a throne was set in heaven, and one sat upon the throne."

This throne was Jesus Christ exalted, set, that is, lifted up, not as upon the cross, to the contempt and scorn of his person, but, as I said, to the wonderment of the four beasts, and the elders, and all the angels in heaven. "A throne was set in heaven, and one sat on the throne;" that is, God. And this intimates his desirable rest for ever; for to sit is to rest, and Christ is his rest for ever. Was it not therefore well worth the seeing? Yea, if John had taken the pains to go up thither on his hands and knees; I say, to see the Lord Jesus as a throne set in heaven, and the glory of God resting and abiding upon him, and giving out by him all things, not only his Word, but all his dispensations and providences to the end of the world; and this blessed thing among the rest, even "a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal."

IV. But I leave this and proceed to the fourth and last thing, namely, to the NATURE and QUALITY of this water. It is said to be pure and clear, pure and clear as crystal: "And he showed me a pure river of the water of life, clear as crystal." I know that there is a two-fold quality in a thing, one with respect to its nature, the other with respect to its operation. The first of these is inherent, and remaineth in the subject being as such, and so for the most part useless. The other is put forth when it meeteth with fit matter on which it may freely work. As for instance, aqua vitæ, the very metaphor here made use of, hath a quality inherent in it ; but keep it stopped up in a bottle, and then who will may faint notwithstanding ; but apply it, apply it fitly, and to such as have need thereof, and then you may see its quality by the operation. This water, or river of grace, is called, I say, the water of life, and so consequently, has a most blessed inherent quality ; but its operation is seen by its working, the which it doth only when it is administered, and received for those ends for which it is administered. For then it revives where life is, and gives life where it is not. And thus far in general have we spoken to it already. We will therefore in this place more particularly, though briefly, speak a few words unto it. First, then, this water of life is the very ground-work of life in us, though not the ground-work of life for us. The ground-work of life for us, is the passion and merits of Christ; this is that for the sake of which grace is given unto us, as is intimated by the text: it proceeds from the throne of God, who is Christ. Christ then having obtained grace for us, must needs be precedent, as to his merit, to that grace he hath so obtained. Besides, it is clear that the Spirit and grace comes from God through him; therefore as to the communications of grace to us, it is the fruit of his merit and purchase. But I say, in us, grace is the ground-work of life; for though we may be said to live virtually in the person of Christ before God; yet we are dead in ourselves, and so must be until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high; for the Spirit is life, and its graces are life, and when that is infused by God from the throne, then we live, and not till then. And hence it is called as before, living water, the water of life springing up in us to everlasting life. The Spirit then, and graces of this Spirit, which is the river here spoken of, is that, and that only, which can cause us to live; that being life to the soul, as the soul is life to the body. All men therefore, as was said before, (though elect, though purchased by the blood of Christ,) are dead, and must be dead, until the Spirit of life from God and his throne shall enter into them; until they shall drink it in by vehement thirst, as the parched ground drinks in the rain.

Now when this living water is received, it takes up its seat in the heart, whence it spreads itself to the awakening of all the powers of the soul. For as in the first creation, the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, in order to putting that creature into that excellent fashion and harmony which now we behold with our eyes; even so the new creation, to wit, the making us new to God, is done by the overspreading of the same Spirit also. For the Spirit, as I may so say, sitteth and broodeth upon the powers of the soul, as the hen doth on cold eggs, till they wax warm and receive life. The Spirit then warmeth us, and bringeth the dead and benumbed soul—for so it is before conversion—to a godly sense and understanding of states, of states both natural and spiritual: and this is the beginning of the work of the Spirit by which the soul is made capable of understanding what God and himself is.

And this drinking in of the Spirit, is rather as the ground drinks in rain, than as a rational soul does through the sense of the want thereof.

The Spirit also garnisheth the soul with such things as are proper for it to the making of it live that life that by the Word of God is called for.

It implanteth light, repentance, faith, fear, love, desires after God, hope, sincerity, and what else is necessary for making the man a saint : these things, I say, are the fruits and effects of this Spirit, which as a river of water of life proceedeth forth from the throne of God and of the Lamb. Hence the Spirit is called the Spirit of faith, the Spirit of love, and the Spirit of a sound mind ; for that the Spirit is the root and original of all these things by his operations in, and upon the face of the soul. (2 Cor. iv. 13. Gal. v. 22. 2 Tim. i. 7.)

But again, as this living water, this Spirit and the grace thereof, doth thus, so it also maintains these things once planted in the soul, by its continual waterings of them in the soul.

Hence he saith, "I will water it every moment." (Isa. xxvii. 3.) Water IT—his vineyard, the soul of the church, the graces of the church; and so the soul and graces of every godly man.

And because it so happeneth sometimes, that some of these things wherewith the Holy Ghost has beautified the soul may languish to a being, if not quite dead, yet "ready to die;" (Rev. iii. 2;) therefore he doth not only refresh and water our souls, but renews the face thereof, by either quickening to life that which remains, or by supplying us with that which is new, to our godly perseverance and everlasting life. Thus "thou visitest the earth, and waterest it; thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God." (Psalm lxxv. 9.)

For this must be remembered, that as the herb that is planted, or seed sown, needs watering with continual showers of the mountains; so our graces, implanted in us by the Spirit of grace, must also be watered by the rain of heaven. "Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly; thou settlest the furrows thereof: thou makest it soft with showers; thou blessest the springing thereof." (Psalm lxxv. 10.) Hence he says that our graces shall grow. But how? "I will be as the dew unto Israel; he shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive-tree, and his smell as Lebanon. They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine; the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon." (Hosea xiv. 5—7.) Or, as he saith in another place, "The Lord shall guide thee continually, and satisfy thy soul in drought, and make fat thy bones; and thou shalt be like a watered garden, and like a spring of water whose waters fail not." (Isa. lviii. 11.)

There is, besides this, another blessing that comes to us by this living water, and that is the blessing of communion. All the warmth that we have in our communion is the warmth of the Spirit. When a company of saints are gathered together in the name of Christ to perform any spiritual exercise, and their souls be edified, warmed and made glad therein, it is because this water, this river of water of life, has in some of the streams thereof, run into that assembly. (Jer. xxxi. 12, 13.) Then are Christians like those that drink wine in bowls, merry and glad: for that they have drunk into the Spirit, and had their souls refreshed with the sweet gales, and strong wine thereof. This is the feast that Isaiah speaks of when he saith, "In this mountain shall the Lord of hosts make unto all people a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined." (Isa. xxv. 6.) This is called in another place, "the communion of the Holy Ghost." (2 Cor. xiii. 14.) Now he warmeth spirits, uniteth spirits, enlighteneth spirits, reviveth, cherisheth, quickeneth, strengtheneth graces; renews assurances, brings old comforts to mind, weakens lusts, emboldeneth and raiseth a spirit of faith, of love, of hope, of prayer, and makes the Word a blessing, meditation a blessing, and duty very delightful to the soul. Without this water of life, communion is weak, flat, cold, dead, fruitless, lifeless; there is nothing seen, felt, heard, or understood in a spiritual and heart-quickenning way. Now ordinances are burdensome, sins strong, faith weak, hearts hard, and the faces of our souls dry, like the dry and parched ground.

This drink also revives us, when tempted, when sick, when persecuted, when in the dark, and when we faint for thirst. The life of religion is this water of life; where that runs, where that is received, and where things are done in this spirit, there all things are well: the church thrifty, the soul thrifty, graces thrifty, and all is well. And this hint I thought convenient to be given of this precious water of life, that is with reference to the operative quality of it.

I shall come, in the next place, to speak of it, as to the other descriptions which John doth give us of it.

He says it is, First, Pure; Secondly, Clear; Thirdly, Clear to a comparison. "And he showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal."

First. You read here, that this water of life is pure, that is—1. alone without mixture, for so sometimes the word pure is to be understood. As where it saith, "Pure olive oil." (Exod. xxvii. 20.) "Pure frankincense." (Exod. xxx. 34.) "Pure gold." (Exod. xxv. 11—17.) "Pure blood of the grape." (Deut. xxxii. 14.) and the like. So then, when he saith, "He showed me a pure river of water of life," it is as if he had said, he showed me a river of water that was all living, all life; and that had nothing in it but life. There was no death, or deadness, or flatness in it; or, as he saith a little after, "And there shall be no more curse." "A pure river." There is not so much as a grudge, or a piece of an upbraiding speech found therein. There is in it nothing but heart, nothing but love, nothing but grace, nothing but life. "The gifts and calling of God are without repentance." (Rom. xi. 29.)

2. Pure is sometimes set in opposition to show or appearance; as where he says, "The stars are not pure," (Job xxv. 5,) that is, not so without mixture of darkness as they seem to be: so again, "If thou wert pure and upright," (Job viii. 6,) that is, as thou seemest to be, or as thou wouldst have us believe thou art.

Now, take pure in this sense here, and then the meaning is, it is grace without deceit, without guile; its show and its substance are the same; it has nothing but substance in it; it is indeed what it seems to be in bulk; it is a river in show, and a river indeed. It comes from God and from his throne in appearance, and really it comes from his very heart.

The great fear of the tempted is, that there is not so much grace in God, and that he is not so free of it as some scriptures seem to import. But this word pure is levelled against such objections and objectors, for the destroying of their doubts, and the relieving of their souls. There is no fraud, nor guile, nor fable in the business; for though God is pleased to present us with his grace under the notion of a river, it is not to delude our fancies thereby; but to give us some small illustration of the exceeding riches of his grace, which as far, for quantity, outstrips the biggest rivers, as the most mighty mountain doth the least ant's egg, or atom in the world.

3. But again, this word pure, is set in opposition to that which is hurtful and destructive. I am pure from the blood of all men; (Acts xx. 26;) that is, I have hurt nobody. "The wisdom that is from above is first pure," it is not hurtful. (James iii. 17.) Do you "count them pure with the wicked balances?" how can that be, since they are hurtful? (Micah vi. 11.)

Now take pure in this sense here, and then it intimates that the grace of God, and the doctrine of grace, is not a hurtful thing. It is not as wine of an intoxicating nature. (Eph. v. 8.) If a man be filled with it, it will do him no harm. The best of the things that are in this world are some way hurtful. Honey is hurtful. (Prov. xxv. 16, 27.) Wine is hurtful. (Prov. xx. 1.) Silver and gold are hurtful; but grace is not hurtful. (1 Tim. vi. 10.)

Never did man yet catch harm by the enjoyment and fulness of the grace of God. There is no fear of excess or of surfeiting here. Grace makes no man proud, no man wanton, no man haughty, no man careless, or negligent as to his duty that is incumbent upon him, either from God or man; no, grace keeps a man low in his own eyes, humble, self-denying, penitent, watchful, savoury in good things, charitable; and makes him kindly affectioned to the brethren, pitiful and courteous to all men.

True, there are men in the world that abuse the grace of God, as some are said to turn it into wantonness, and "into lasciviousness." (Jude, 4.) But this is not because grace has any such tendency, or for that it worketh any such effect; but because such men are themselves empty of grace, and have only done, as death and hell have done with wisdom, "heard the fame thereof with their ears." (Job xxviii. 22.) It is a dangerous thing for a man to have the notions of grace while his heart is void of the spirit and holy principles of grace, for such a man can do no other than abuse the grace of God. Alas! what can be expected of him that has nothing in him to teach him to manage that knowledge of grace which he has, but his flesh, his lusts, and lustful passions? Can these teach him to manage his knowledge well? will they not rather put him upon all tricks, evasions, irreligious consequences and conclusions, such as will serve to cherish sin? What Judas did with Christ, that a graceless man will do with grace, even make it a stalking-horse to his fleshly and vile designs; and rather than fail, betray both it and the profession of it to the greatest enemies it has in the world.

And here I may say, though grace is pure, and not hurtful at all, yet one altogether carnal, sinful, and graceless, having to do with the doctrine of it, by the force of his lusts which tamper with it, he will unavoidably bring himself into the highest ruin thereby. An unwary man may destroy himself by the best of things, not because there is in such things an aptness to destroy, but because of the abuse and misuse of them. Some know the way of life, the water of life, by knowledge that is naked and speculative only, and it had been better for such if they had not known, than to know and turn from what they know; than to know and make that knowledge subservient to their lusts. (2 Pet. ii. 20—22.) Some receive the rain of God, and the droppings of his clouds, because they continually sit under the means of his grace. But, alas! they receive it as stones receive showers, or as dunghills receive the rain; they either abide as hard stones still, or else return nothing to Heaven for his mercy, but as the dunghills do, a company of stinking fumes. These are they that drink in the rain that comes often upon them, and that instead of bringing forth herbs meet for the dresser, bring forth briars and thorns ; and these are they who are nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned. (Heb. vi. 7, 8.)

4. By this word pure, I understand sometimes the chieftest good, the highest good. There are many things that may be called good, but none of them are good as grace is good. All things indeed are pure, that is all creatures in themselves are good and serviceable to man, but they are not so good as grace. (Rom. xiv. 20. Gen. i. 31.) “There is a generation that are pure,” that are good in their own eyes. (Prov. xxx. 12.) There are good men, good consciences, good works, good days, good angels, &c., but none so good as grace, for it is grace that has made them so. Grace, this water of life, therefore is good, superlatively good, good in the highest degree, for that it makes all things good, and preserveth them good, and whatever it be that this water of life washeth not, it is evil, and given to the curse, as the prophet intimates where he saith, “But the miry places thereof, and the marshes thereof, shall not be healed, they shall be given to salt.” (Ezek. xlvi. 11.)

But who understands this, who believes it? Its goodness is kept close from the fowls of the air. Men, most men, are ignorant of the goodness of it, nor do they care to enquire after the enjoyment of this pure, this good water of life. The reason is, because though it is good in itself, good in the highest degree, and that which makes all things good, yet it is not such a good as is suited to a carnal appetite. There is good, and there is suitable good: now suitable good is of two sorts; either such as is spiritual, or such as is temporal. That which is spiritual, is desired only of them that are spiritual, for temporal good will satisfy a carnal mind. Now grace is a spiritual good; this river of grace is the goodness of spiritual good. It is the original life of all the grace in our souls: no marvel, then, if it be so little set by of those that are carnally minded. Hay will serve a horse, and mire will serve a sow; so things of this life suit best with the men of this world, for their appetite is gross and carnal, and they savour not the things that be of the Spirit of God. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God;" (the things that be of this river of God); "for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." (1 Cor. ii. 14.) This is a river of oil which the prophet speaks of, the river of spirit. Were it a river of gold and silver, there would be odd fishing on the banks thereof. But it is a river that runs "like oil, saith the Lord God." (Ezek. xxxii. 14.) This rock pours us out rivers of oil, fresh oil, soft oil, sweet oil, the oil of joy, the oil of gladness, oil to anoint the head withal, oil to make the face to shine, oil by which thou wilt be made able to honour both God and man in some good measure as becometh thee. (Job xxix. 6; Psalm xcii. 10; Psalm lv. 21; Isa. lxi. 3; Psalm xlv. 7; Eccl. ix. 8; Psalm civ. 15; Judg. ix. 9.)

I might have enlarged upon this head, and have showed you many more particulars wherein this term pure might serve for the better setting forth of the excellency of this water of life, but I shall proceed no farther upon this, but will come to that which remains.

Secondly, as this river of water of life is said to be pure, so it is said to be clear. "He showed me a pure river of water of life, clear."

This term has also its peculiar signification, and therefore ought to be heeded.

1. Clear is set in opposition to dark; therefore some are said to be "clear as the sun." And again, "The light shall not be clear nor dark." (Song vi. 10; Zech. xiv. 6.) In both these places clear is to be taken for light, daylight, sunlight; for indeed it is never day, nor sunshine with the soul, until the streams of this river of life come gliding to our doors, into our houses, into our hearts. Hence the beginning of conversion is called illumination. (Heb. x. 32.) Yea, the coming of this river of water of life unto us is called the dayspring from on high, through the tender mercy of our God. (Luke i. 78.) It is also called the dawning of the day. (2 Pet. i. 19.) And hence again, these men into whom this river of water of life comes not, are said to be dark, darkness. "Ye were sometimes darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord." (Eph. v. 8.) Wherefore this water is like Jonathan's honey; it hath a faculty to open the eyes, to make them that sit in darkness to see a great light. (1 Sam. xiv. 27; Matt. iv. 16.) "The light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." (2 Cor. iv. 6.) "God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light" (the Spirit that enlighteneth and giveth the light) "of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." This river casteth beams where it goes, like the beams of the sun; it shines, it casts out rays of glory unto those that drink thereof. The streams of this grace were they that overtook Saul when he was going to Damascus; they were the waters of this flood that encompassed him round about. (Acts ix. 3; chap. xxvi. 13.) And if you will believe him, he saith, this light from heaven was a great light, a light above the brightness of the sun, a light that did by the glory of it, make dark to him all the things in the world.

2. Clear is set in opposition to that which is not pleasing. For to be clear is to be pleasant. Hence it is said, "Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun." (Eccl. xi. 7.) I read of rivers that looked red as blood, that stank like the blood of a dead man: (Exod. vii. 19, 20; 2 Kings

iii. 22, 23:) but this is no such river. I read of rivers whose streams are like streams of brimstone, fiery streams, streams of burning pitch; (Isa. xxx. 27—33; Dan. vii. 9—11; Isa. xxxiv. 9;) but this is none of them. There is a river besides all these, clear and pleasant, “the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God.” (Psalm xli. 4.)

There are the waters that the doves love to sit by, because, by the clearness of these streams, they can see their pretty selves, as in a glass. (Song v. 12.)

These are the streams where the doves wash their eyes, and by which they solace themselves, and take great content. These streams are instead, as I said, of a looking-glass; their clearness presents us with an opportunity of seeing our own features. As in fair waters, a man may see the body of the sun, and of the moon, and of the stars, and the very body of heaven; so he that standeth upon the bank of this river, and that washes his eyes with this water, may see the Son of God, the stars of God, the glory of God, and the habitation that God has prepared for his people. And are not these pleasant sights? Is not this excellent water? Has not this river pleasant streams?

3. Clear is set in opposition to dirty water and muddiness. I read of some waters that are fouled with the feet of beasts, and with the feet of men, yea, and deep waters too. Yea, saith God to some, ye "have drunk of the deep waters," and have "fouled the residue with your feet;" and again, "as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet, and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet." (Ezek. xxxiv. 18, 19.) These waters are doctrines contained in the text, muddied and dirtied by the false glosses and sluttish opinions of erroneous judgments, of which the poor sheep have been made to drink. And verily this is apparent enough, by the very colour and hue of those poor souls: for though the truth of God was in them, yet the very stain of tradition and superstition might be also seen in their scales. For as the fish of the river receive, by being there, the changeable colours of the waters, so professors, what doctrine they hear and drink, do look like that. If their doctrines are muddy, their notions are muddy;

if their doctrines are bloody, their notions and tempers are bloody; but if their doctrines are clear, so are their notions, for their doctrine has given them a clear understanding of things.

Now, here we have a river of water of life, that is clear—clear without dirt and mud—clear without the human inventions and muddy conceptions of unsanctified and uninstructed judgments: yea, here you have a river, the streams whereof lie open to all in the church, so that they need not those instruments of conveyance that are foul, and that use to make water stink, if they receive it to bring it to them that have need.

4. By clear we sometimes understand purgation; or that a thing has purged itself, or is purged from those soils and imputations of evil wherewith sometimes they have been charged. "Then thou shalt be clear from this my oath;" or, "How shall we clear ourselves?" (Gen. xxiv. 8; xlv. 16.) Something of this sense may be in the text, for if men are not afraid to charge God with folly, which is intimated by "that thou mightest be clear when thou judgest," (Psalm li. 4,) will they, think you, be afraid to impute evil to his Word, and grace, and Spirit? No, verily; they are bold enough at this work. Nay, more than this, even from the foundation of the world, men have cast slanders upon, and imputed base things unto the blessed grace of the gospel. But not to look so far back. Paul was one of the pipes through which God conveyed this grace to the world; and what was he counted for his so doing, but “a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition throughout the world?” (Acts xxiv. 5, 6.)

But, behold, no imputation can stick on the grace of God—not stick long; for that like honey, will purge itself of what filth is put into it, and of all bad imputations of evil men. Springs and rivers are of a self-purging quality: now here we have to do with a river, a river of water of life; but a river more slandered than ever did Naaman the Syrian slander the waters of Israel, in preferring those of Abana, and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, beyond them. (2 Kings v. 12.) But behold, now at last, when all the world have done what they can, and have cast what reproaches and slanders upon it they are able, it is a river pure and clear. It has purged itself before kings, it has purged itself before princes and judges, and all the Naamans in the world. It is still a river, a river of water of life, a river of water of life, clear.

5. By clear we sometimes understand purity manifest, or innocence and goodness made known. "In all things ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter." (2 Cor. vii. 11.) That is, you have made it appear, and stand upon your justification, and are willing to be searched and sounded to the bottom by those who have a desire to undertake that work. So this river of water of life, in the fountain and in the streams thereof, offers itself to the consideration and conscience of all men. To this end, how often doth God, the head of this river, and he out of whose throne it proceeds, call upon men to challenge him, if they can, with any evil or misdoing towards them, either by presence or doctrine; hence he says, "Put me in remembrance, let us plead together, declare thou," if thou canst, and I am condemned, "that thou mayest be justified." (Isa. xliii. 26.) So again, "What iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone far from me, and have walked after vanity, and are become vain?" (Jer. ii. 5.) So Christ, "Which of you convinceth me of sin?" (John viii. 46.) And, "If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil." (John xviii. 23.) So Paul, "We have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God." (2 Cor. iv. 2.) All these sentences are chiefly to be applied to the doctrine, and so are, as it were, an offer to any, if they can, to find a speck, or a spot, or a wrinkle, or any such thing in this river of water of life.

Some men fly from it, as from a bear; and some are afraid to drink of it for fear it should be poison unto them. Some, again, dare not take it because it is not mixed, and as they, poor souls, imagine, qualified and made toothsome by a little of that which is called the wisdom of this world. Thus one shakes, another drinks, and another will none of God. Meanwhile, whoso shall please to look into this river, shall find it harmless and clear ; yea, offering itself to the consciences of all men, to make trial if it be not the only chief good, the only necessary waters, the only profitable, for the health of the soul, of all the things that are in the world, and as clear of mischief as is the sun of spots.

Thirdly. As John saw this river pure and clear, so he saw it clear to a comparison. Clear to the best of comparisons, clear as crystal. Crystal is a very clear stone, as clear as the clearest glass, if not clearer ; one may see far into it, yea, through it ; it is without those spots, and streaks, and smirches that are in other precious stones. Wherefore when he saith, that this river is clear as crystal ; it is as if God should say, Look, sinners, look to the bottom of these my crystal streams. I have heard of some seas that are so pure and clear, that a man may see to the bottom, though they may be forty feet deep. I know this river of water of life is a deep river : but though it is said to be deep, it is not said we can see no bottom. Indeed as to the wideness of it, it is said to be such as that it cannot be passed over ; but I say, it is nowhere said that we cannot see to the bottom; nay, the comparison implies that a man with good eyes may see to the bottom. It is clear, as clear as crystal. So then we will a little look down to the bottom, and see through these crystal streams, what is at the bottom of all.

1. Then, the bottom of all is, "that we might be saved." "These things I say," saith Christ, "that ye might be saved;" and again, "I am come that you might have life, and that you might have it more abundantly." (John v. 34; x. 10.) This is the bottom of this great river of water of life, and of its proceeding from the throne of God and of the Lamb; it is that we might be saved: it is that we might live. What a good bottom is here! what a sound bottom is here! But few deep rivers have a good bottom. Mud is at the bottom of most waters in the world; even the sea itself, when it worketh, casts up mire and dirt, and so do the hearts of sinners: but the bottom of this grace of God, and of the Spirit, and Word thereof, is that we might be saved; consequently a very good bottom.

2. As the bottom of all is, "that we may be saved;" so that we may be saved by grace, and this is the bottom sounder and sounder. Our salvation might have been laid upon a more difficult bottom than this. It might have been laid on our works. God might have laid it there, and have been just, or he might have left us to have laid it where we would, and then, to be sure, we had laid it there, and so had made but a muddy bottom to have gone upon to life. But now, this river of water of life has a better bottom; the water of life is clear as crystal, look down to the bottom and see: we are "justified freely by his grace." (Rom. iii. 24.) "By grace ye are saved:" (Eph. ii. 5, 8;) there is the bottom. Now, grace, as I have showed you, is a firm bottom to stand on, it is of grace that life might be sure. (Rom. iv. 16.) Surely David was not here, or surely this was not the river that he spake of when he said, "I sink in deep mire where there is no standing; I am come into deep waters where the floods overflow me; deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink." (Psalm lxix. 2, 14.) I say, to be sure this could not be the river; no, David had now straggled out of the way, and was tumbled into some pit, or into some muddy and dirty hole; for as for this river, it has a good bottom, a bottom of salvation by grace; and a man needs not cry out when he is here, that he sinks, or that he is in danger of being drowned in the dirt or mire.

3. The bottom of all is, as I said, that we might be saved by grace, and I will add, "through the redemption that is in Christ." This is still better and better. We read that when Israel came over Jordan, the feet of the priests that did bear the ark stood on firm ground in the bottom, and that they set up great stones for a memorial thereof. (Josh. iii. 17; iv. 1—3.) But had Jordan so good a bottom as has this most blessed river of water of life, or were the stones that Israel took out thence like this tried stone, this sure foundation? (Isa. xxviii. 16.) Oh the throne! this river comes out of the throne, and we are saved by grace through the redemption that is in him. We read that there is a city that has foundations; grace is one, Christ another, and the truth of all the prophets and the apostles, as to their true doc- trine, another, &c. (Heb. xi. 10.) And again, all these are the very bottom of this goodly river of the water of life. (Eph. ii. 19, 20.)

4. There is another thing to be seen at the bottom of this holy river, and that is, the glory of God; we are saved, saved by grace, saved by grace through the redemption that is in Christ, to the praise and glory of God. And what a good bottom is here! Grace will not fail, Christ has been sufficiently tried, and God will not lose his glory; therefore they that drink of this river shall doubtless be saved; to wit, they that drink of it with a spiritual appetite to it: and thus much for the explication of the text.

USE.

I come now to make some use of the whole.

YOU know our discourse has been at this time of "the water of life," of its quantity, head-spring, and quality; and I have showed you that its nature is excellent, its quantity abundant, its head-spring glorious, and its quality singularly good.

First. Let this then, in the first place, be a provocation to us to be more free in making use of this water. There are many, now-a-days, that are for inventing of waters, to drink for the health of the body; and to allure those that are ill to buy, they will praise their waters beyond their worth. Yea, and if they be helpful to one person in a hundred, they make as if they could cure every one. Well, here you have the great Physician himself with his water, and he calls it the water of life, water of life for the soul; this water is probatum est. It has been proved times without number: it never fails but where it is not taken. No disease comes amiss to it; it cures blindness, deadness, deafness, dumbness. It makes "the lips of them that are asleep to speak." (Acts xxvi. 18. Song vii. 9.) This is the right holy water, all other are counterfeit; it will drive away devils and spirits; it will cure enchantments and witchcrafts; it will heal the mad and lunatic; it will cure the most desperate melancholy; it will dissolve doubts and mistrusts, though they are grown as hard as a stone in the heart. (Gal. iii. 1—3. Mark xvi. 17, 18. Ezek. xxxvi. 26.) It will make you speak well. (Col. iv. 6.) It will make you have a white soul, and that is better than to have a white skin. (Ezek. xxxvi. 25.) It will make you taste well, it will make you disrelish all hurtful meats; it will beget in you a good appetite to that which is good; (Isa. xxx. 22;) it will remove obstructions in the stomach and liver; it will cause that what you receive of God's bread shall turn to nourishment and make good blood. In a word, it preserveth life. (John iv. 14.) They that take this water shall live longer than old Methuselah; and yet he lived a great while. (Gen. v. 27.)

Wherefore, let me continue my exhortation to you. Be more free in making use of this water. It is the wholesomest water in the world; you may take it at the third, sixth, ninth, or eleventh hour, but to taste it in the morning of your age is best; (Matt. xx. 3—6;) for then diseases have not got so great a head as when they are of long continuance; consequently they will be removed with far more ease: besides, those that thus do, will receive endless life, and the comfort of it betimes; and that you know is a double life to one. (Eccles. xi. 1—4.)

This water gently purges; and yet more effectually than any others. True, where bad humours are more tough and churlish, it will show itself stronger of operation, for there is no disease can be too hard for it. It will, as we say, throw the house out of the windows; but will rid us of the plague of those most deadly infections that otherwise will be sure to make us sleep in death, and bring us, with the multitude, down to hell. But it will do us no hurt; it only breaks our sleep in security, and brings us to a more quick apprehension of the plague of our heart and flesh. It will, as I said before, provoke to appetite, but make us only long after that which is wholesome. If any ask why I thus allegorize, I answer, the text doth lead me to it.

Secondly. I advise, therefore, in the next place, that thou get thee a dwelling-place by these waters. “The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him, and the Lord shall cover him all the day long.” (Deut. xxxiii. 12.) If thou ask, where that dwelling is, I answer, in the city of God ; in and among the tabernacles of the most High. This river comes from the throne to water the city of God ; and to that end it is said “to run in the midst of the street of it.” (Rev. xxii. 2.) If ye will enquire, return, come. “The seed also of his servants shall inherit it, and they that love his name shall dwell therein.” (Psalm lxix. 36.) Get thee a dwelling in Jerusalem, in the midst of Jerusalem, and then thou wilt be seated by this river.

In old times, the ancients had their habitations by the rivers ; yea, we read of Aroer that stood upon the brink of the river Arnon. (Josh. xiii. 9.) Balaam had also his dwelling in the city Pethor, “by the river of the land of the children of his people.” Oh ! by a river side is the pleasantest dwelling in the world ; and of all rivers, the river of the water of life is the best. They that dwell there “shall not hunger nor thirst ; neither shall the heat nor sun smite them ; for he that hath mercy on them shall lead them, even by the springs of water shall he guide them.” (Isa. xlix. 10.) Trees planted by the rivers, and that spread out their roots, they are the flourishing trees, they bring forth their fruit in their season. (Psalm i. 3.) And the promise is, that men that take up their dwellings by this river of water of life, shall be fruitful as such trees. If thou art a Christian, thou hast more than an ordinary call and occasion to abide by these waters. Thy things will not grow but by these waters. Weeds, and the excellencies of most men, we may find in the barren wilderness, they grow under every hedge; but thine are garden, and so choice things, and will not thrive without much water of God's river: dwell therefore here, that thy soul may be as a watered garden. (Jer. xxxi. 12. Isa. xii. 1—3.) And when thou seest how those that are loath to die, make provision at Tunbridge, Epsom, Bath, and other places, and what houses they get that they may have their dwellings by those waters, then do thou consider of thy spiritual disease, and how nothing can cure thee but this blessed water of life: be also much of desires to have a dwelling-place in Jerusalem, that thou mayest always be nigh to these waters. Be often also in watering thy plants with these waters ; I mean the blessed graces of God in thy soul ; then shalt thou grow and retain thy greenness, and prove thyself to be a disciple indeed. And herein is God, and thy Father, glorified, that thou bear much fruit. (John xv. 8.)

Thirdly. My third word is, bless God for providing man such waters. These only can make us live ; all others come out of the Dead Sea, and do kill : there is no living water but this. I say, show thy acceptance of it with thanksgiving ; if we are not to receive our bread and cheese but with thanksgiving, how should we bless God for this unspeakable gift ! (2 Cor. ix. 15.) This is soul life, life against sin, life from sin, life against the curse, life beyond hell, beyond desert, beyond thought, beyond desires. Life that is pleasing, life that is profitable, life everlasting.

O my brethren, bless God ! who doth good, and gives us such rain, filling our hearts with food and gladness. When Moses would take the heart of Israel, and took it in hand to raise up their spirits to thankfulness, he used to tell them that the land that they were to go to was a land that God cared for, and that was watered with the dew of heaven. Yea, "a land of brooks of water, of fountains and depths that spring out of valleys and hills: a land flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands." (Deut. viii. 7. Exod. iii. 8; xiii. 5. Lev. xx. 24. Num. xiv. 8.) But yet in his description, he makes no mention of a river of water of life; a river the streams whereof make glad the city of God.

This river is the running out of God's heart, the letting out of his very bowels, for God is the living God. This is his heart and soul. "Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly, with my whole heart, and with my whole soul." (Jer. xxxii. 41.) I say, if ever God's heart and soul appeared, it showed itself in giving this water of life and the throne from whence it proceeds. Wherefore there is all the reason in the world that in the reception of it, thy heart and soul should run out and flow after him in thanksgiving. See how David words it in the hundred and third psalm, all the first five verses, and do likewise.

Fourthly. By the characters that are given of this water of life, thou art capacitated to judge, when a notion, a doctrine, an opinion, comes to thine ears, whether it is right, good, and wholesome, or how. This river is pure, is clear, is pure and clear as crystal. Is the doctrine offered unto thee so? or is it muddy, and mixed with the doctrines of men? Look, man, and see if the worshippers of Bel be not there; and if the waters be not fouled thereby. The water that is fouled is not the water of life, or at least not the water of life in its clearness. Wherefore if thou findest it not right, go up higher to the springhead, for always the nearer to the spring, the more pure and clear is the water. Fetch, then, thy doctrine from afar; if thou canst not have it good nearer hand. (Job xxxvi. 3.) Thy life lies at stake, the counterfeit of things is dangerous; everybody that is aware, is afraid thereof. Now a counterfeit here is most destructive, wherefore take heed how you hear, what you hear: for, as I said before of the fish, by your colour it will be seen what waters you swim in; wherefore look you well to yourselves.

Fifthly. Doth this water of life run like a river? like a broad, full, and deep river? then let no man, be his transgressions ever so many, fear at all, but there is enough to save his soul, and to spare. Nothing has been more common to many than to doubt of the grace of God; a thing most unbecoming a sinner of anything in the world. To break the law is a fact foul enough; but to question the sufficiency of the grace of God to save therefrom, is worse than sin, if worse can be. Wherefore, despairing soul, for it is to thee I speak, forbear thy mistrusts, cast off thy slavish fears, hang thy misgivings as to this upon the hedge; and believe thou hast an invitation sufficient thereto, a river is before thy face. And as for thy want of goodness and works, let that by no means daunt thee; this is a river of water of life, streams of grace and mercy. There is, as I said, enough therein to help thee, for grace brings all that is wanting to the soul. Thou therefore hast nothing to do, I mean as to the curing thy soul of its doubts and fears, and despairing thoughts, but to drink and live for ever.

Sixthly. But what is all this to the DEAD world—to them that love to be dead? They toss their vanities about as the boys toss their shuttlecocks in the air, till their foot slips, and themselves descend into the pit. Let this suffice for this time.

